- Aboriginal Community Health Workers, health promotion officers & advocates for sexual & reproductive health.
- Postgraduate students enrolled in related courses

The course: Sex is fun! Well it should be, however, we know that the Northern Territory experiences some of the poorest sexual health outcomes in Australia. The worldwide burden of unsafe sex, unwanted pregnancies & STIs, is enormous. Sexual & reproductive health is not just about germs & organs but about peoples’ right to know, to understand their sexuality & to enact their rights. Rights to sexual diversity, sexual pleasure, the number & timing of children they desire to have. This is underpinned by good public health policies, evidence-based practices & laws that enable practitioners to do their job.

The presenter: Suzanne Belton is a Senior Lecturer & medical anthropologist at Menzies. Her research interests include maternal health, reproductive health rights, cross-cultural health, especially in areas of conflict & displacement. She received her PhD in 2005 from University of Melbourne & works in China, Thailand, Timor-Leste, West Timor & remote Australia. She has published in; Social Science & Medicine; Health Care for Women International; Midwifery; Reproductive Health Matters; ‘Becoming a Mother: A cross cultural perspective on reproduction & childbearing’, (Ed) Liamputtong, 2007; & ‘Abortion in Asia: Local Dilemmas, Global Politics’, (Ed) Whittaker, 2010.
