SUMMARY OF POSITION:
Menzies School of Health Research is seeking to appoint a Lecturer in Public Health. The Lecturer will have academic strengths in global health, Indigenous health and qualitative research methodologies. They will be expected to take a lead role in developing innovative content for the online teaching environment, which is the main mode of coursework delivery, as well as facilitate and present face-to-face lectures and tutorials. The successful candidate will be available to commence teaching in Semester 1 2016.

Menzies is a leading national research institute that seeks to improve health outcomes and reduce health inequity for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and people living in tropical and remote areas in the Asia-Pacific region. You will become part of the Menzies Education and Training team who coordinate and deliver the Charles Darwin University postgraduate courses in Public Health and Health Research. Our students enjoy a curriculum emphasis on global and Indigenous public health and benefit from the knowledge transfer of Menzies research. We have plans to diversify the student cohort and offer the course internally in 2017.

PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITIES:

1. Provide a high quality learning experience for students in both the online and face-to-face environments;
2. Teach postgraduate public health and health research units;
3. Development of course materials suitable for online and face-to-face delivery;
4. Provide academic support, relevant, timely and constructive feedback to students;
5. Apply the CDU learning and teaching policies and procedures, particularly on matters of academic integrity, assessment, moderation and conduct.
6. Contribute to the enhancement of the quality of learning and teaching through Faculty committees and communities of practice.
7. Any other academic duties, commensurate within grade as reasonably required by the manager and/or Director.
SELECTION CRITERIA:

Essential:

1. PhD or equivalent degree in a public health or allied discipline/ Master degree with extensive public health practice and research experience;
2. Demonstrated knowledge and skills in developing learning materials, teaching, marking assessments and providing constructive feedback to postgraduate students;
3. Demonstrated effectiveness and a commitment to excellence in teaching;
4. Ability to mentor and to supervise postgraduate students;
5. Experience with Higher Education administrative requirements;
6. Possess excellent interpersonal skills with ability to interact effectively with academic colleagues and students and high level liaison with internal and external audiences;
7. Demonstrated ability to work as part of a collaborative team to deliver overall course outcomes;
8. Show an understanding and awareness of relevant Workplace Health and Safety as well as Equal Opportunity principles and legislation along with a commitment to maintaining a healthy and safe workplace for all Menzies staff, students, volunteers and visitors.

Desirable:

1. Postgraduate qualification in teaching and learning and willingness to further develop core skills in teaching effectively in higher education;
2. Emerging research track record in peer-reviewed publications;
3. Capacity to build local and international academic networks and partnerships.
