

menzies
school of health research

DISCOVER-TT
Centre of Research Excellence

STREP-CaCIndA
A Strategic Research Partnership

Towards systematic monitoring of the experiences of care of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people with cancer

Monica Green¹, Joan Cunningham¹,
Kalinda Griffiths² and Gail Garvey¹

¹Menzies School of Health Research and ²The University of Sydney

menzies
school of health research

DISCOVER-TT
Centre of Research Excellence

STREP-CaCIndA
A Strategic Research Partnership

Phase One

Who is involved?

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people affected by cancer.
Health professionals working in cancer care for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.

Part A: Interviews and focus group discussions

- What needs to be measured?
- How should it be measured?
- What is different?

Part B: Based on Part A, study team develops tool/methods to pilot test

Part C: Interviews and focus group discussions
Pilot testing tools and methods reviewed by participants and finalised

menzies
school of health research

DISCOVER-TT
Centre of Research Excellence

STREP-CaCIndA
A Strategic Research Partnership

Towards systematic monitoring of the experiences of care of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people with cancer.

Overview

Phase One – 2016	Phase Two – 2017	Phase Three – 2018
Qualitative study with consumers and health professionals to develop pilot study.	Pilot study to test tool/s and methods developed in Phase One.	Integrate Phase Two results with experience measurement activities in general population.

menzies
school of health research

DISCOVER-TT
Centre of Research Excellence

STREP-CaCIndA
A Strategic Research Partnership

Questions??