

Close the Gap Day Charity Breakfast 2014 - Tickets now on sale

Thursday, 30 January 2014

The Menzies School of Health Research (Menzies) Close the Gap Day Charity Breakfast is now a fixture on Darwin's annual social calendar.

Coinciding with National Close the Gap Day (20 March), the charity event will support research to improve Aboriginal lives and draw attention to health disparities between Indigenous and other Australians.

Indigenous Australians can expect to live substantially shorter lives than other Australians – 12 years less on average – and experience higher rates of preventable illness such as heart disease, kidney disease and diabetes.

People attending the breakfast will enjoy fine food and cultural performances while hearing from Menzies' leading Indigenous health experts about current projects which are having a meaningful and measurable impact in improving Indigenous health and wellbeing.

Menzies Director, Professor Alan Cass said he was looking forward to the charity breakfast which marks an important Day for all Australians.

"We are eager to build on the success of last year's event which saw government, private industry, Indigenous organisations, health professionals and the general public come together to hear about how Menzies is working to close the gap," he said.

Menzies will once again partner with the Rioli Fund for Aboriginal Health and the Darwin Convention Centre for the Northern Territory's premier Close the Gap Day event. All donations on the day will go towards Menzies' Indigenous traineeship appeal which will support a young Indigenous Australian to pursue their career in medical and health research.

"It is an important time to reflect on the work that has already been done and to strengthen our resolve to improve access and health outcomes for Aboriginal people. This cannot be achieved without the generous support of the Territory community," Prof Cass said.

"This year we hope to attract new supporters to join people who are already making significant contributions towards Menzies in our drive to provide job opportunities for Indigenous Australians and to make a real difference."

The Menzies Close the Gap Day Charity Breakfast will be held on Thursday, 20 March 2014 from 7.30am-9.00am at the Darwin Convention Centre.
