Relationships Australia South Australia (RASA) Australian Institute of Social Relations (AISR)	Internal Cultural Safety Training for Relationships Australia Staff Target Audience: It is mandatory that all staff at Relationships Australia must complete this course as part of their induction Course Summary: Every who starts at Relationships Australia goes through an induction program which includes cultural safety training; initially 1 hour on Aboriginal cultural safety and 1 hour on cultural safety in general. This sets the scene that cultural diversity is taken very seriously. Then the second session is a 2 days of cultural fitness training. The first day covers history before and after colonisation, a chronological overview of Aboriginal history after colonisation covering old and new laws. The second day focuses on the practice and what are some of the things that need to be considered in a multicultural environment in day to day work, and how we can work together productively and efficiently without being paralysed by the awful history. The managers of each team enforce staff cultural training compliance and then facilitate ongoing cultural safety discussions within their team to work towards cultural fitness. Delivery Mode: face to face. Date of Construction: 2009 Course that pre-dated it: The course prior to this was an informal discussion upon induction about cultural considerations within to consider in the workplace. Duration: 2 x 1 hour introductory, 2 day cultural safety workshop, followed by ongoing cultural safety training within teams. ▪Working With First Nation People

Institution	Cross-cultural program(s)	Who receives this?
	Target audience: Community Services and Health Workers Course summary: Cultural Fitness is designed to develop cultural competence and facilitate action for reconciliation. Our workshops aim to support culturally safe and effective work practices and relationships and also address the recruitment and retention of Aboriginal Staff. In order to work more effectively with Aboriginal communities you will be encouraged to reflect on your own cultural ways and to explore how these might change to enhance interactions with Aboriginal people. The major focus of our Cultural Fitness training will highlight practices of dominant culture and white privilege rather than specifying Aboriginal ways (which brings with it the hazard of stereotyping all Aboriginal people). An understanding of the history of Invasion of this land is fundamental to current issues and working relationships between Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal people. This two-day workshop is facilitated by two trainers of Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal background who model robust and positive working relationships. Delivery mode: Face to Face Date of construction: approx. 1999 Duration: Two-day interactive workshop Resources used: multimedia resources Cost: $350 per person or $3,500.00 plus GST for organizational/agency groups up to 25 participants Link: http://www.socialrelations.edu.au/workforce-development/working-with-first-nation-people-and-diverse-populations/ ▪Cultural Awareness & Working with Diversity Target audience: Community Services and Health Workers Course summary: Cultural Awareness & Working with Diversity is designed to develop the cultural competencies to work with migrants and recent arrivals by building culturally safety and effective work practices. Link: http://www.socialrelations.edu.au/workforce-development/working-with-first-nation-people-and-diverse-populations/ Date of construction: approx. 1999 Delivery mode: Face to Face Duration: 1 day Resources used: multimedia resources Cost: $200 per person or $1,750.00 plus GST for organizational/agency groups up to 25 participants Contact: Iain Henderson (08) 8245 8100, info@airs.edu.au, http://www.socialrelations.edu.au/ Enaam, Cultural Diversity Trainer e.oudih@rasa.org.au
